THE POWER OF GROUP HATE

50% of work of individuals are spent as 'false' work. I.e. social media surfing.

Most group members view slackers as ones that take credit for their hard work.

People tend to reject a group when things are unfamiliar, complex, or unpredictable.

Time wasted in meetings can cost up to $71 million per year furthering group hate.

Disagreements, ambiguity, and arguments create group hate.

Students tend to have negative perceptions of groups upon failure and the end of a semester.
